SUBSCRIPTION TO THE EVENING WORLD. PER MONTH

VOL. 30.....NO. 10,264

Entered at the Post-Office at New York as second-class

STRICTLY "PRIVATE."

There has been published a letter purporting to be from Corporal TANNES to " Private " DALZELL. If it is authentic, "Private" DALZELL ought to be ashamed to see it in print. It is a frank communication, such as might be expected to pass between two such masters of loquacity. It is a sturdy selfdefense. It tells, as TANNER has often done. a great many things which wisdom, had he any, would have prompted him to keep to himself. And he ends this warm burst of confidence thus:

P. S .- I have written to you with great freedom. Don't give me any cause to regret it by saying anything about this letter. It is to you

It is likely that "JIM" TANNER has facts enough in his possession to stir up a hornet's nest of frightful magnitude in the Grand Old Party. It is not unlikely, either, that he will do it if the Administration declines to dance a step or two to his music. But there's no hurry, and if he dribbles out what he knows, in confidential letters such as this one, to openmouthed friends such as Private DALBELL, to whom nothing is "private," his powder, by the time he is ready to fire his big shot, will have no more explosive force than a boiled

James, don't be a fool. If you want to vindicate yourself, make a superhuman effort and keep your mouth shut.

SEE HIM WRIGGLE.

Of all the Burds that ever Grubbed, Gen. Early Burd Gauss, of New Jersey, is beyond doubt the most graceful squirmer. His ultimatum on the temperance question is an exquisite bit of contortionism that would make Dezano, the man-snake, turn green with jealousy. Says this sgile Gauns to the people of applejack-loving Jersey:

The party has expressed a willingness to leave that matter with the people, and will follow out whatever course the people shall decide will be best for the eradication of intemperance

This is the manner of Gauss used to bait the Republican hook in Jersey.

COME, SETTLE UP.

The accounts of the Washington Centennial celebration have not been closed yet, though four months have elapsed. That eclipses for slowness the famous Gov.

BRAVER and his Johnstown relief system. ELBRIDGE T. GERRY, they say it is you Committee that is away behindhand. Just give style and steam yachting a rest for a little while and attend to this business.

Only eight points still between Boston and the Giants. They win when we win, but, thank our stars, they lose when we lose. If the Nemesis of hard luck will only give us a little let up for the rest of this fight we'll be tossing up our hats before long. Take courage, New York. They are betting $100 to #25 on you in Chicago.

"You can't get a jury that will understand stocks," said Napoleon Ives yesterday. No. HENRY, nor a judge either, as you manipulate them. It was lucky for you, may be, that such is the fact.

OFF THE STAGE.

Miss Helen Barry always occupies a box at each new production at the Union Square Theatre. She is always accompanied by a party of ladies and gentlenien, is whom she talks very vivaciously. Miss Barry in private life is unaffected and amiable.

Charles Garthorne, imported to play the part of Capt. Grimston. The non-cophonicus Grimston was very signally abandoned on the stage.

Miss Marion Earle is very quiet, refined and untheatrical in private life. She drives simply but teste-fully, and severee any elabora e continuing for the stage. Miss Earle has recently made some land pur chases in the far West.

Mrs. Yeamans, who for so long has "supported " Edward Harrigan, is hardly to be recognized off the stage by those who have seen her in her funny costumes. Mrs. Yeamans is very serious and subdued in private life.

MEN OF MUSCLE.

Harry Beecher, who will play quarter-back for the Orange football team this Fall, has the reputation of being its best quarter-back Yale ever had. MARCHHARE'S WILL.

If there hadn't been a touch of-well, to put ! mildly- a touch of secentricity about old John Marchhare, he would hardly have made such a

Several years before, the vessel in which he was returning from the West Indies went down at seas, with heariy all on board. John Marchhare was picked up by one of the boats, clinging to a little girl—a mere child—whose life he had saved, while he relatives and all who knew her were among the lot.

From the little stranger thus thrown upon his care he did not turn away. She was too young to give any account of her parents or family; and all subsequent efforts to discover her kindred or whence she came proving fruitless, John Marchhare adopted her and took her to his home and heart.

Having neither wife nor child, he felt free to do as he would with his handsome fortune; and it niessed him that it should go to his adopted daughter—"provided," so ran his will. "that if my said adopted daughter should marry during the lifetime of my brother. Edward Marchhare, whom I hereby constitute her guardian, without the approval of my said brother.

This was an eccentric will: but, we have already said, John Marchhare was an eccentric mar. It is easy to see that it left to Alice Marchiner, as a he was caled, the threefold choice of accepting a husband of her guardian's election, of remaining single during his lifetime, or of forfeiting her fortune. That it was thus made the inter-tof Edward Larchhare to oppose any match that might be diered to Alice was a point that probably did not occur to the testor, or, more likely still, he knew his brother better than to suspect that sordii motives would ever sway him in fulfilling a trust committed to his conscience.

Alice had barely reached womanhood when her benefactor died; but when it was known how John Marchhare's will as the signal for falling in love with Alice, as several others had done, in spite of her leauty. The truth is, he had been in that state as far back as he could reached how, had always liked George.

But when George Preston naked Mr. Edward Marchhare's permission to tender his hand to this on which her went man of the head.

"Have you a home to offer her?" he asked; "or means to support her?" he added, befo

The allotted time had nearly gone by before fleerige, after many struggles and hardships, had succeeded in laying up the sum which entitled him to appear and claim of Mr. Marchhare the fulfilment of his promise.

At a railway station, the last stopping-place on his journey home, he went into the refreshment room for supper. He had not half finished the soanty repast when the sound of the bell, and the summons of the porters, caused a general commotion and rush for the train. George caught up his overcoat, and followed the rest.

George caught up his overcoat, and followed the rest.

On reaching his destination he was about to draw on his overcoat preparatory to leaving the carriage, when for the first time he discovered that the garment he had brought from the supper-room was not his own. It was similar in color and material, but the attempt to put it on at once revealed the difference. He was thunderstruck at the discovery. In a secret pocket of his own cost was the banknote which had cost him three years of anxious toil, and which represented as many precious hopes.

He willly ran about among the dispersing passengers, looking sharply at every man he met, as though expecting to find upon him the object of his search. But all in vain; it was nowhere to be seen.

With a vague purpose of advertising everywhere, and telegraphing in all direct ons, he was hurrying rapidly along, when whom should he meet but Mr. Marchhare:

was hurrying rapidly along, when whom should he meet but Mr. Marchhare:

"I am very sorry," said the old gentleman, gravely; "but you know my conditions; and with respect to their fulfilment, it seems you are inst where you started."

"Give me but another chance!" cried George. I can carn double as much in the same time. I will work night and day to do it!"

"Your time is up bo-day, "said Mr. Marchhare: "and I have promised my old friend, Wells, in the event of your failure, that his son Lawrence may pay his addresses to Alice to morrow. The young man, though well enough, is something of a for, and I doubt if Alice will listen to his suit. Still, my word is pas-ed. Ah, here he could be added to the proceeding. "What do you means" exclaimed George by the collar. "What do you means" exclaimed George dashing aside the hand so rudely laid upon him. Miss Antique. Then there is some chance for you yet. VERY RISKY INDEED.

To tamper with symptoms undicative of growing kidney disorder, to neglect for a brief time needful stimulation of the renal organs when their inactivity points, as it always and unmistakably does, to their eventual permanent disease, is certainly very risky indeed. This is, however, a risk that many persons perceptibly drifting into Bright's disease, diabetes, caterrh of the bladder, &c., constantly incur. So those who read, reflect and heed the lessons of recorded experience, the advisability of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a diuretic, need scarcely more than a suggestion. No fact is more generally admitted by the medical profession and the public than its efficacy for the prevention of serious renal disease. The unmedicated excitants of commerce. no matter how pure, bear in mind, react prejudicially upon the kidneys when juscilies. The Bitters subdues malaria, constipation and rheumatism.
